Twin Engine goes Green.

Twin Engine is taking a break from recording “The Night in Bethlehem” and will be performing at this years EarthFest 2011 at the Cleveland Metropark’s Zoo, April 17th. Twin Engine kicks off the day of music and entertainment at noon in the amphitheater. “We look forward to playing for the new elephants, zebra’s and giraffes, and of course, the humans as well”; said Christopher, lead guitar of the band.

Twin Engine is performing “under sail.” A different approach to their typical performances (semi-unplugged). The trio consisting of Kent Dockus, Christopher Dockus and Justice Buike are performing an acoustic/instrumental set of all original music.

“We welcome all our fans, and new one’s to experience Twin Engine in a new way,” said Kent and Justice. But have no fear, you can catch Twin Engines’ roar in June at Salt Fork State Park and in August at the Ohio State Fair. Be sure to check www.tetheband.com for all performance dates.
